

MARCH OF THE DINOSAURS (PART 1)

JACK: Do you hear that?
(DINOSAURS appear atop the hill.)

ANNIE: Oh, it's the Triceratops! Looks like they're stopping over there to get a drink.

JACK: Yeah, and it also looks like they brought some friends with them.

ANNIE: Cool. Let's go meet them!
(ANNIE moves to stand up, JACK pulls her back down.)

JACK: Wait. Not so fast. (JACK thumbs through his book.) The book says that the only time plant eaters and meat eaters gathered together was around a watering hole. Some of those guys could be meat eaters. And they could be hungry, too.

ANNIE: (more excited than scared) Well, look them up in the book, Jack!
(JACK flips through the book, until he finds a match.)

ANNIE: What are those guys with spikes on their backs?

JACK: (pointing to picture in the book) They're called, "Ankylosaurus."
(As if in a pageant, each group of DINOSAURS moves to the "spotlight" when they are talked about, and address their lines to the audience, as if the information in the book is coming to life.)

ANKYLOSAURUS: (to audience) Don't worry, we prefer ferns to flesh. These spikes are for protection, not destruction. We may weigh four tons, but the only way we can keep a T-Rex from flipping us over and snacking on our soft underbelly is to keep our spikes nice and... spikey.

ANNIE: I like the little ones with the frilly stuff on their necks.

JACK: Those are Protoceratops.

PROTOCERATOPS: We travel in herds because we're what you might call the "runts of the dinosaur litter." There's safety in numbers, plus, everything's more fun when you're with your friends.

ANNIE: And look at those!

IGUANODONS: We're Iguanodons. We have spikes for thumbs. Cool, huh? And even though we walk on all fours, if we need to run fast, we can really book it on two legs.

PANOPLOSAURUS: We don't have thumbs, but we have three fingers. We're called Panoplosaurus. Yeah, try and say that five times fast. It means, "completely armoured lizard," but if it's easier, you can just call us, "Tank."

TROODON: (in unison) And they call us Troodon! Do not let our size fool you. We may be small, but, not to brag, we have the largest brains outta any of these guys.
